Mr. Wittmer,

The FEMA process is certainly not a quick or easy one, so I truly appreciate your kind and encouraging words. I also want to thank you for providing this information, as it is very helpful. I hope you are doing well and finding some time to relax.

Thank you!

Hello Olivia:

Good to hear from you and trusting that things are going well for you; though I am certain that processing the paperwork for FEMA must consume considerable time and take a great deal of effort – and all of us here in Lake Lure should be grateful for your involvement with those tasks.

Truth is, our contractor for the beach rehabilitation recovered “lost” beach sand from the former water’s edge of the site to fill the runnels and washouts and then level the overall beach surface, rather than bringing in new sand from outside. Hence, there were only equipment and operator costs which we donated. That expense was roughly $5,000, but no new sand was purchased or supplied for that donation.

On the other hand, I believe that the Town supplied considerable additional sand (multiple truckloads) when, several months after we did our beach re-hab and some weather events had washed the beach again, the Town restored much of the beach’s sand, as well as dressed the site surface.

Hoping that this is some help,
George

Subject: Beach Sand Question

Hi Mr. Wittmer,

I'm currently working through the FEMA process on several projects, one of which involves the beach. FEMA has asked for details on the sand that you donated for the beach. Do you happen to know the quantity of sand provided, and could you share that information with me?

Thank you!
